

The Total Population Of Canada Placed At Over Ten Million

Ottawa, Ont.—Total population of Canada will be about 10,000,000, according to figures for 1931, published by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Friday night.

October 27, based on the 1931 census returns, figures for 1931 show that the population of Canada has made the largest absolute gain in the past 10 years and British Columbia the largest percentage gain of all provinces.

The declaration of the representative of the House of Commons, Mr. Bennett, was made as a result of the census returns, which show that 240,000 more people are now in Canada than in 1921. On the other hand, Alberta has lost 10,000 people since 1921. It will gain one and British Columbia will gain 100,000 people. The provinces will remain unchanged.

Quebec is the only province to show a decrease in population. It lost 10,000 people since 1921. The population of the province is now 1,000,000. The population of the province is now 1,000,000. The population of the province is now 1,000,000.
